On a GIS Based Hydrological Model for Flow and Contamination Transport in Lake Kinneret Watershed

A. Ostfeld\textsuperscript{a} and A. Pries\textsuperscript{b}

\textsuperscript{a} Civil Engineering, Technion – Israel Institute of Technology, Haifa 32000, Israel
\textit{Email: ostfeld@tx.technion.ac.il}

\textsuperscript{b} Civil Engineering, Technion – Israel Institute of Technology, Haifa 32000, Israel
\textit{Email: preisa@tx.technion.ac.il}

\textbf{Abstract:} This paper describes the efforts and current achievements of developing a GIS based hydrological model for flow and contaminants transport within Lake Kinneret watershed. The proposed model is built of hydrological “input-output” physical response blocks for routing rainfall-runoff water quantity and quality in sub-watersheds, coupled further with a delineated GIS database. An illustrative example of the model capabilities is demonstrated.

\textbf{Keywords:} Watershed, Contamination, GIS, Model, Surface Hydrology, Groundwater Hydrology.